Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Handbook of Civic Improvement This little book is intended to do three things. In the first place it is meant to show the average citizen and city official alike what is to be expected of city government. Thus, by setting up an ideal to strive after, it aims to educate the general public up to a higher expectation of results from its city, with a corresponding willingness on the part of the tax payers to furnish the necessary means for accomplishing those results. In the second place it is intended to furnish to civic organizations a handy guide book for a community survey which shall set forth by convincing evidence the short comings of their own community. It was this aspect of the city government problem which first suggested the present undertaking, because the author had on various occasions been requested for assistance in directing the work of civic associations and clubs along effective lines. The willingness and devotion were present for accomplishing great things, but the efforts lacked direction and therefore largely came to naught. It is particularly with the growing civic activity of womens clubs in mind, and to aid them in their work that this book is written, though mens organizations, and collegiate civic associations can of course profit equally and use the book to the same advantage. In the third place it is intended for use as a laboratory guide in municipal science for college classes.
