This is a personal PTSD Heroes Odyssey of a young man from Indianapolis, Indiana who joins the US Army during the Vietnam War. With only 15 days to leave Vietnam he is wounded and has a near death experience of going into and through the Sun Light and into Heaven. He is returned to his body by James Guardian Angeles in the middle of an intense gun battle and wakes up wounded to the sound of AUM. 33 soldiers died this day. He ends up in Ireland Army Hospital at Ft. Knox, KY on the amputee ward from The US Army Osaka Japans amputee ward. James spends 6 months in the hospital living in a wheel chair like in the movie Born on the Forth of July. The Army wants him to sign the medical authorization to amputate his left arm against his will. He has been doped up on morphine by the US Army. He meets Larry Johnson also a combat veteran and a recent amputee from Harlem in the bathroom crying a 2 in the morning. I asked he why he is crying He said, look what they did to me. They are doing to do this to you. Dont sign the medical release and ask to see another doctor. He refuses to sign the documents. The Army locks him down in his room for not signing the documents. No Telephone use or priveledges of the Day Room. All because he is government property (GI). The Army claims they can do what ever they want with James. Larry gives James some sacrament called Blue Cheer from Harlem for inspiration. He said the Boys Rave that Ill see God....
