Excerpt from A Voice From the Grave: Speech by the Late Earl of Beaconsfield, K. G., At the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, April 3, 1872 The Ministers are perplexed, but the Sovereign says, Thirty years ago I, re member a similar lstate of affairs, and then he states the course taken by the people who advised him on the difficulty, and successfully advised him. And though he may maintain himself within the strictest limits of the Constitution, who can suppose that, when such suggestions are made by the most exalted person in the country, they can be without effect? The Minister who would treat such information and such expe rience with indifference would not be a constitutional Minister, but an arrogant idiot. Gentlemen, I maintain when such observations are made they are, in my mind, made by the creatures of ignorance. I think it right to call your attention to these suggestions, because I think they have some meaning in them, and when we are separated you can muse over them, as I think, with profit. Gentlemen, the in?uence of the Monarchy in England must always be considerable. England is a domestic country. It is a country where home is revered, and the hearth is sacred. Such a countrys is properly represented by a family - by a Royal Family. If the members of that family have been, educated with a sense of their duty to their people and their responsibility, it is impossible to exaggerate the importance of the position which they occupy in our social system. Gentlemen, it is not merely a question of their in?uence over manners, not merely that they may offer a type of all that...
