Excerpt: . . . 11 ensuring that we use sound science, that our actions are transparent, that we extensively consult with the public and other federal agencies, particularly with the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), and that our decisions allow a reasonable transition for agriculture and for the important public health uses of pesticides, to adopt new pest management tools and techniques. KEY FQPA ACCOMPLISHMENTS EPA has had many successes in implementing FQPA. We have met deadlines established for the reassessment of pesticide tolerances (legal residue limits), taken significant actions to reduce pesticide risks in a reasoned and responsible manner, established greater communication with groups impacted by our decisions, and improved our coordination with the USDA on pesticide issues. To that end, EPA and USDA have established the Committee to Advise on Reassessment and Transition (CARAT) to strengthen the interaction with all our stakeholders. CARAT helps to ensure that our decisions are open, well understood, and take into consideration the input from all interested parties. In addition, EPA Administrator Christine Todd Whitman created a position on her immediate staff for a Senior Agricultural Advisor and appointed Jean Marie Peltier, who previously worked closely with California agriculture and was an experienced state regulator. Despite the additional requirements imposed by FQPA, EPA has been able to maintain its pre-FQPA productivity in registering new pesticides and reduce the response time for emergency exemption requests. Working with USDA, we have significantly improved the data used to make decisions on the registration and reregistration of pesticides. We have also taken steps to make our reviews, and the science supporting them, more transparent for...
