Excerpt from The Story of Archer Alexander: From Slavery to Freedom, March 30, 1863 I therefore asked the Opinion of several friends, who, like myself, had lived all those years under the Shadow Of the peculiar insti tution, in one or other of the northern tier of the slave States, and who labored faith fully for its abolition, giving the best service of their lives to the cause of freedom, pos sessing their souls in patience while contend ing against what seemed to be an irresistible power. Their concurrence has confirmed me in the Opinion, that, however feebly drawn, a true picture, so far as it goes, is given in these pages of the relation between master and slave, and of the social condition Of slave holding communities.
