My object in writing this pamphlet is to endeavour to supply answers to these questions. Were the matter merely one of historic interest it would cause me no concern. Regarding the recent strike as I do, however, as the most momentous and significant event of modern times, and the action of the Government as the most sinister and menacing of which this generation has had experience, I deem it incumbent upon me to let in all the light possible upon what happened. The nation was placidly pursuing the even tenor of its way, buying and selling and giving in marriage, and amusing itself with the trumpery make-believe of party politicians, when suddenly a great gulf yawned across its path, and for 36 hours it stood trembling on the brink of it knew not what. The babblings of the politicians were hushed: the vapourings of the party press ceased: the political crisis vanished into thin air;...
