Excerpt from The Serio-Comic Profession: A Book for Writers, and for Such Readers as May Be Interested in Them and Their Craft I happen to know that when he was Speaker of the House of Representatives. Tom Reed received for signing his name to a preface he had not written which was to precede a set of books he had not seen, but which bore his name as editor-in-chief. That, I believe, to be the highest rate ever paid for literary work in America. The successful novelist, and especially the successful playwright, if shrewd in business matters, may command large prices. But they are rare birds, as rare as black swans. Two publications have advertised a minimum rate of five cents a word for fiction, but the minimum rate of many fiction magazines is only $10 per which is less than the double space rate almost any New York newspaper will pay for an exclusive news story. When it comes to writing books, profits rise from nothing at all to an average of a few hundred dollars. One man of genuine ability, and of international reputation, as some of his works are selling in Europe, told me he had published ten volumes, his average profit on each being $200.
