

A Misrepresentation of Myself

By Mary E. Gilder

MEG's Publishing. Paperback. Condition: New. 214 pages. Dimensions: 8.3in. x 5.5in. x 0.6in. Mary Gilders intriguing Fictional debut novel A MISREPRESENTATION OF MYSELF, begins with the introduction of Zolla Ramsey a woman whom to the naked eye might appear to have it all. An exquisite home nestled in one of Chicagos most affluent communities, a thriving marriage and family practice and friends that adore her. If that isnt enough, she has a husband that adorns her with all the luxuries money can afford and makes it his priority to satiate her every sexual desire. As perfect as Zollas life presents, one might inquire as to why Zolla is feeling uninspired, emotionally depleted and depressed. Could the answer lay in the reality that home is actually an empty shell, veiled by materialism to compensate for her mounting marital issues and dwindling passion Perhaps, the answer lies in unresolved family secrets that continue to haunt her. Better yet, maybe its the intolerance she displays when confronted with the one particular issue, the one issue that has lead her to immediately terminate valued friendships. For years, Zolla has been able to mask these issues welling beneath her flawless exterior. Until she finds herself confronted...
