Excerpt from Ecological Effects of the Lawn Lake Flood of 1982, Rocky Mountain National Park With these words, Steven Cashman described his harrowing experience with the flood that swept his camping companion to his death in the Roaring River. Other campers along the Roaring River estimated the wall of water to be 8 - 10 m high, carrying with it large trees and boulders, so that the water looked like a wet, brown cloud that sounded like extremely loud continuous thunder, or a freight train, or an airplane breaking the sound barrier.
