FBC LTD, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Scope: September, 1938 Careful measurement of the intra-ocular pressure in myopes has never revealed any increase in intra-ocular tension. The vast majority of people (70 per cent to 80 per cent) are hyperopic, compensating for their structural hyperopia by accommodating. Yet, in spite of the constant use of accommodation, the eye remains hyperopic and only relatively few become myopic. If the myopia remains uncorrected, less accommodation is needed in close work. In fact, when the myopia reaches three or more diopters. The accommodation is not active for the near focusing. Yet, in spite of the inactivity of accommodation the myopia progresses. Thus, we see that if accommodation is responsible for the production of myopia, the method whereby this is accomplished is not clear, and sufficient evidence has been presented to prove that accommodation itself cannot be held responsible for the etiology of myopia. It is possible that the use of accommodation may play a role in the etiology of myopia. But just how it does so is not yet clear and it may be possible, further, that accommodation may play a secondary role. And only become effective when the eye is predisposed to other factors.
