Not illustrated. 1856 Excerpt: . . . to the house of a Nurse returned home, and sent her to the place at which her help was required. It was then the business of an Inspector, Conde, an old Waterloo soldier, to go there, to ascertain whether the interior economy of the house was such that the order of the Medical Attendant could be followed. If not, his duty was to forward from the Police Office the deficiency: food, bedding, blankets, hot bottles, and c. And lastly, because the most important, a lady, (who desires her name to be withheld,) visited daily every house (within a certain area) to instruct the Nurses, to comfort the sick, to cheer the disconsolate; and, where need was, herself to supply a sudden emergency, or to relieve a wearied attendant. By day and by night she plied this task, and when she rested, or where, --as long at least as she knew of a house where disease had entered, --is known to herself alone. Over the whole of these arrangements Mr Cartwright, Deputy Chairman of the Board of Guardians, presided; he received the Reports of the Inspector, who gave a list of the daily state of affected houses; he paid the wages, engaged or dismissed the Nurses, and shewed in all his transactions the power of blending acute business habits with a most benevolent humanity. Distribution of Food. . 7. Oxford is a small town: it numbers but 27, 000 inhabitants: it claims among its residents, if...
