Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Natural Vegetation of Casa Grande Ruins National Monument, Arizona The monument was established in 1918. The land was never plowed during historic times, although it is currently surrounded by groundwater and river-irrigated agriculture. The boundary was fenced to protect it from livestock grazing in 1934. Decline of the water table caused the native mesquite trees to die during the 1940s (Judd) It is conceivable that the effects of grazing, water table decline, and possibly pesticide drift from aerial spraying of nearby cotton fields have reduced or eliminated other floral elements as well.
