Hitt, of Illinois, in the House of Representatives, Saturday, June 11, 1898 They sit facing our western coast - that long stretch confronting the great Pacific Ocean, the most extensive body of water in the world, stretching away for six, seven, eight thousand miles-and they are the nearest point to our coast, and far, very far, removed from any other point in that vast sea. They are miles away from us. That seems a very considerable distance, but the immense stretch beyond them to the other portions of the earth is so much greater that they seem comparatively near and are a part of our own system. With the great change in the construction of fighting ships, all of which are now moved by steam, coal has become an essential of maritime war, as much so as powder or guns, and across that wide ocean any vessel of war coming to attack the United States must stop for coal and supplies at the Hawaiian Islands before it can attack us. NO ship can be constructed, no battle ship exists in the world, which can make the trip from the other side of that wide sea to our shores, conduct any Operation of hostility against us, and ever get back unless it has its supply of coal renewed. Mr. Kelley. Will the gentleman permit an interruption? I simply want to call the gentleman's attention to the map. Mr. Hitt. We are all pretty familiar with the map - the remarkable position of these islands and the routes that ships are accustomed to follow. I do not suppose that my personal opinion is...
