Excerpt: .and dreaming of plunder, Till this terrible war-whoop did rouze him like thunder. He started--and muttered, while Jowler gave tongue, I've often been rouzed thus, the day is but young; 111 scale this high fence, and again take tire field; If I be overtaken, I'll die ere I yield.' Resolved--gave a spring--took the way he thought best, Pop, pop, went the pease, as if at a crowds nest; An eye more discerning soon gave him the twitch, But fifty yards more and he dropt in the ditch Reynard's Last Speech. Don't think, like a ruffian, I'm here to declare f'oul deeds, or to say to you, watch and beware; Of actions' immoral, I ne'er knew the name, And cunning will ever redound to my fame. Should the place of my birth be the subject of quarrel, Unto all be it known, I belong to Riscarrel; Inured to fatigue, and accustomed to wander, I've often defeated the Great Alexander. By my teeth you will find that my years double five, Of my progeny numbers, perhaps, are alive; Death not more uncertain thro' frequent delay, The proverb still proving, 'Each dog has its day. Hunter for the County. I'm accused of bloodshed, of rapine--what not? But the sheet of my conscience contains not a blot; My conduct in life was dame Nature's desire, While you, cruel mortals, will murder for hire. The page of the ancient I pray call to mind, You'll find it recorded, ' I'm useful of kind, ' When,...
