

Field Notes on Language and Kinship

By Tyler Chadwick

Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Susan Krueger-Barber (illustrator). 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In Field Notes on Language and Kinship, Tyler Chadwick follows poetry wherever it leads him, from acts of analysis and interpretation to poetic inspiration, from remembering to deliberate living and becoming. The book records many of his encounters with poems and poets from his anthology, Fire in the Pasture: Twenty-first Century Mormon Poets (El Cerrito, California: Peculiar Pages, 2011). These encounters took shape in various ways as he revisited Fire in the Pasture the many months after it was published. For example, an image from one of the anthology's poems reminded him of a different poem he had read-so he wrote a response that makes a connection between them. Or a line from a poem recalled an experience from his personal life (or foretold one he would have)-and he captured the moment as a memoirist. Or a passage from a poem prompted him to explore the poem's ideas in a larger context of thought-and he slipped into the role of an essayist. Or an excerpt from a poem inspired a poetic response-so he...
