

The Maieutologue

By Joubert Richardson

Booksurge Publishing. Paperback. Condition: New. 282 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.6in. Religious faith stands against anything that makes the world a place of universal solidarity. It is amoral, despotic, and contrary to the unifying goal of humankind. The preconceived idea of spirituality as a just cause of supernatural devotion epitomizes human aberrance expressed in the frigid rectitude of cultural superstition. Religious faith neutralizes individual capacity of self-actualization through the ossification of human intelligence. Whatever the depths of religious aspirations, they remain forever in the realm of spiritual phantasms. Because it is inspired by artificial human volitions, religious faith can never turn into natural momentum. Everything that has been done in our world has been designed by human beings for the sake or the failure of humankind. Supernatural beliefs are artful expressions of human hopelessness that reaches for what is beyond human intelligibility. The Autotelism is the absolute negation of ideological precepts that, by definition, are concerned with the spiritual deliverance of humans through the scheme of religious intercession. Instead of practicing fair culture and protection of universal existence, primordial measures defining humans intellectual liabilities, the exploiter of God wastes the nations energy in the crippling commerce of theocentric exploitation....
