Excerpt from Diffraction of Electromagnetic Waves by a Plane Wire Grating In the infrared region the grating constant is much greater than a wavelength. In this case one can assume that there is no interaction between the wires of the grating. The diffraction field is taken as the sum of diffraction fields of the individual wires of the grating, the field of any one wire calculated neglecting the other wires. The grating is assumed to consist of a set of infinite, parallel, equidistant, perfectly conducting circular cylinders. The set may be taken as finite, showing the background in addition to the various order spectra. Only the infinite grating will be considered here. This approach was extended somewhat by twersky2 who included the first order interaction effects between neighboring elements in the case of an acoustic wave incident on a grating of perfectly rigid circular cylinders.
