Excerpt: . knowing how, and by the mere force of sympathy. In listening to Wilson, you not only increased your knowledge, your store of facts, but you were delighted with the beauty and harmony of their relations and interdependence; and few indeed are the sermons that can leave so deep an impression of reverence for Him whose works science interprets, as did the simplest of George Wilson s compositions. There was such a charming play of fancy about his lectures, adorning but never obscuring the accuracy of his observations, or the close method of his arrangement. He was one of the most learned of our men of science, at once the most practical and the most poetical, the most attractive lecturer and effective teacher; and never did a purer, gentler, kindlier being exist in human shape. In his hands, Professor Macdougall1 remarks, every subject was felt to become not intelligible only, or even interesting, but almost enchanting. The value and attractions of knowledge were not merely understood, but intimately felt and appreciated, when exemplified in the joyous activity and happy dispositions of one, who drew so evidently and so largely from knowledge the aliment of his energies, and the materials of varied and exquisite enjoyment. In the spring of 1846, he was requested by the Young Men s Society to give a short course of lectures on the Relation of Physical Science to the doctrines mooted in the Vestiges of the Natural History of Creation, in...
