Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Confessions of Claud: A Romance More than thirty years ago, in a part of New-York which was then open field and is now densely-populated city, I, Otho Claud, first saw the light. My home was a square, prim cottage, guiltless of a single ornament. From its rear doorway, across rolling acres clad in the short verdure which is a sure token of barren or neglected soil, you could see the waters of the Hudson, sparkling and spacious. Our house stood in a solitude; hundreds of yards lay between ourselves and the nearest neighbor. To the northward rose masses of that abundant native rock whose bulky and rigid recurrences form so continual a feature of Manhattan Island, and whose stolid challenge against the expanding metropolis has met tardy but certain defiance.
