Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1900 edition. Excerpt: . S. George was not known as the Patron Saint of England, till the time of Richard I. (1189-1199,) who during the Crusades placed his army under his especial protection, and made the name of the Saint his battle cry. A great national Council, held at Oxford, 1222, commanded his feast to be kept as a holiday of lesser rank; and it still holds its place in our Calendar among the black letter days. By his name Edward III. in 1330 instituted the most ancient and noble order of knighthood in Europe, that of the Garter. April, 1879. Beneath the figure of S. George, in one of the west lancets of the north transept, is that of S. Barbara, which is also copied from the glass at Ludlow of which I spoke in the Magazine of February. S. Barbara, whom we have already seen represented in the north aisle (Aug., 1878), was a favourite subject of mediaeval art, as the special patroness of all the trades concerned in the making of armour and weapons of war. The legend respecting her describes her as the beautiful daughter of a very rich man, who in his selfish love of her shut her up in a tower from the eyes of men. She gave herself up to learning, and was instructed in the christian faith by letters passing between her and Origen, by one of whose disciples disguised as a physician she was baptized. Her father...
