Excerpt from The Brief: Adventures in the Courts of a New Country and Incidental Studies in the Morbid Anatomy of Government by Organized Corruption The Bible suggests that God was the first Judge. That being so, a judiciary is too sacred a power to abuse: and those who do not take the succession reverently are not morally qualified for the bench. All this, and a great deal more, is extract from a diary, corroborated by indisputable facts, and true. Hamlet complains of insolence of office. High offices are secured by skillful advertising, secret influence, and other forms of bribery: and hypocrites obtain appointive jobs and salaries in the gift of those so elect at your expense. Readers are variously impressed: One item of our diarist s, entitled The Black Hand, in a booklet of sketches called Tears and Smiles of some years ago, for instance, brought forth the question of eminent students whether-social degenerates, so called, do not, after all, display more love for their fellow men than does the average of the public pay-roll: or is it a case of...
