

Constructing Green: The Social Structures of Sustainability (Paperback)

By -

MIT Press Ltd, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Experts consider green construction and the social, institutional, and cultural changes associated with it, through a sociological and organizational lens. Buildings are the nation's greatest energy consumers. Forty percent of all our energy is used for heating, cooling, lighting, and powering machines and devices in buildings. And despite decades of investment in green construction technologies, residential and commercial buildings remain stubbornly energy inefficient. This book looks beyond the technological and material aspects of green construction to examine the cultural, social, and organizational shifts that sustainable building requires, examining the fundamental challenge to centuries-long traditions in design and construction that green building represents. The contributors consider the changes associated with green building through a sociological and organizational lens. They discuss shifts in professional expertise created by new social concerns about green building, including evolving boundaries of professional jurisdictions; changing industry strategies and structures, including the roles of ownership, supply firms, and market niches; new operational, organizational, and cultural arrangements, including the mainstreaming of environmental concerns; narratives and frames that influence the perception of green building; and future directions for the theory and practice of sustainable construction. The...

Reviews

This book is definitely worth acquiring. I have gone through it and so I am certain that I will likely read through it again in the future. It's been printed in an exceptionally basic way, but in fact it is only after I finished reading this publication that I actually altered my opinion, changing the way in my opinion.
