It is a small college, and it is a Christian college. It believes that in both of these facts there is strength. That in days of growth away from such conditions she continues to represent them is due not to her being left behind in the race but to deliberate choice. In each is contained a principle which she believes vital; in the one the view that the function of the college is sound and systematic teaching; in the other the belief that the training of the mind should take place in an atmosphere of high moral and spiritual earnestness. Contact of teacher and taught, not at one but at many points; not only as professor and student, but also as counselor and friend; not merely fitting the minds for intellectual achievement, but developing men for moral mastery; such are some of the ideals involved in this view of the scope of our College. Hand-in-hand with the conservatism represented by this point of view, there is a conservatism in methods that is not less characteristic. Recognizing with the very first the scientific renaissance of the present age, Lafayette began her life with engineering ambitions, and revived them with vigor in 1866.
