Excerpt: .But all is vanish d from my death-struck eye. Farewell to all the scenes of earth beneath: I go to share tli unmingled bliss on high,1 --When this was utter d with her failing breath, Wunnisoo clos d her eyes in peacefulness of death. 41. The visions of a dying saint are true. Death will but lead to life of endless years, The grave to heav n, where joy is ever new. Then wherefore do wo shed the bitter tears, As friend of Jesus sinks and disappears? Think you, that eye will ne er again unclose, Nor sound e er pierce the portals of those ears? Think you, those lips will ne er the thought disclose, And that the marble frame ne er wakes from long 1 repose? 42. The many-footed caterpillar creeps His destin d period slow along the ground, Then weaves his web, in which he dies, and sleeps, While northern streams in icy chains are bound: But when the spring returns, and merry sound Of songsters fills the grove with melody, He bursts the cerements, that had wrapp d him.round, And comes forth in a form, that charms the eye, To float aloft in air a gilded butterfly. 43. And shall then man, more noble than a worm, Created, like the worm, by pow r of God, Ne er feel the influence, that shall change his form, But always sleep beneath the valley s clod? Shame on the doubt: it should receive...
