Excerpt from King Edward VII, Vol. 3: His Life and Reign; The Record of a Noble Career Roman Catholics. His Holiness courteously granted the Princess permission to visit any nunnery she might select, and, by a rare act of indulgence, he authorized her to be accompanied by the members of her suite. On Good Friday, the royal pair, with the Queen of Denmark and Princess Thyra, attended service at the English Protestant chapel outside the Porta del Popolo. Many visits were paid to persons of distinction and to points of interest in the Eternal City, and a great Court banquet was given to the Earl and Countess of Chester by King Victor Emmanuel. Dr. Poore, the physician in attendance, was able by this time to report a marked improvement in the health of the Prince. After many visits to interesting places, including art studios, the royal party, on April 8, left Rome for Florence, whence they made an excursion to Pisa, and left, on April 15, for Milan. Thence they travelled to Venice, back to Milan, and on to Geneva, which was reached on May 17. There they were joined by the Danish royal family, and in the last week of May they were again in Paris, making frequent explorations, and being everywhere received with the respect due to a strict incognito. The restoration of the Prince was now complete, and on June 14 he and his wife landed at Dover. At Marlborough House he took up his ordinary course of life in the London season It was not long, however, before the heir apparent resumed his usual work of attendance at places and on occasions where the ends of public utility could...
