That is not fair, said the squirrel. Then you divide them, said the hare. The squirrel tried. He too took three apples and left one. That is not right, said the hare. He sat thinking a long time. The squirrel thought, too. Presently a boy came along the path. What are you two doing with those apples? he asked. We are trying to divide them equally, said the squirrel. You take two, said the boy, and the hare must take two, too. How do you know? the two friends asked. I go to school, he answered. I have learned that two twos are four, and I have learned other multiplication tables, too. Write on the board all the sentences in which any of these words is found. Explain how each is used wherever it occurs. 2. Written Practice with two, too, to Copy the following, using two, too, or to where you can: THE JACKS<sup>43</sup> The Jacks were Jack Daw and Jack Horner. Jack Horner was fond of Christmas pies. He used sit in a corner and eat them. Jack Daw liked Christmas pies. The Jacks went school. Their sisters went school. The Jacks were in the Fourth Grade. Jack Daw was ten years old, and Jack Horner was ten years old. Jack Horner was...
