Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Environmental Assessment: K and K Road Relocation; June, 1981 The 1978 expansion of Redwood National Park included approximately acres of Simpson Timber Company lands and approximately 9 miles of the Klamath and Korbel (kk) road, the mainline log haul road for the company s northern California logging operations. Based upon Simpson Timber Company maps, approximately acres of lands east of the expanded park are still serviced by this road, with a projected total cut of more than billion board feet of timber over the next 70 years. Previous logging Operations on lands east of the Bald Hills Road (in the Klamath River drainage) used other haul routes in addition to the kk road, including the Bald Hills Road itself. (Simpson Timber Company has the option of using alternative haul routes in the future.) Public Law 95-250, the legislation that expanded the park, permits Simpson Timber Company to continue to use the segment of the kk road within the park at the existing levels and extent of access and use provided that such use is limited to forest and land management and protection purposes, including timber harvesting and road maintenance. The portion of the kk road within the park from Coyote Creek northward for approximately 3 miles to the Copper Creek bridge passes through some of the most erosive terrain in the Redwood Creek basin. Because the area is inherently unstable, some of the slopes would probably fail and deliver sediment to Redwood Creek even without a road. However, the general condition of the slopes has deteriorated markedly since the construction of the road and the beginning of logging in the late 1950s, and hillslopes adjoining this section of the kk road...
