Excerpt: . himself to his work. In other cases it might be expedient for two or more churches to unite under the care of one minister. This plan would require an efficient eldership; for the people ought to meet on their vacant Sabbaths, to keep their Sunday schools in operation, and to unite in social worship; and surely an eldership competent for this purpose THE GOSPEL MINISTRY. 191 might be found; and the people might expect more benefit, from the labors of a man, whom they would have less frequently, but whose heart was in the work, than from the more frequent services of one, whose heart was chilled by the labor and cares of the world. I will observe, in the next place, that a system of well regulated economy must be adopted by Christians, before the church can perform its duty. If the...
