The real reason why you're not getting what you want in today's world, we're becoming more connected to each other every day. Our relationships with people have never been more important. Emotional intelligence is now an essential part of our daily interactions with co-workers, friends, intimate partners and so on. But, here's the problem - most people are not taking full advantage of their emotional intelligence. Even more troubling, is that the signs of low emotional intelligence are often overlooked: low motivation, becoming stressed easily, trouble relating to others and poor social skills are just a few of the common signs. Not too surprisingly, this will determine how successful you'll be. Here's why: For many individuals, their EQ (or level of emotional intelligence) is much more important than their IQ as far as how successful they will be in their careers and general life. We can all agree that intelligence matters, but what has become more important is having the essential social and emotional skills needed to manage your intelligence. Just being smart won't guarantee you success anymore now it's our relationships with others that will make the critical difference in your personal and professional life. Effective communication, self-motivation, and confidence in your relationships are game changers when it comes to any form of success. These skills will make you or break you. Many people think you're born with high emotional intelligence, but actually it's something that anyone can learn. What's more, leveling up your EQ is a high-leverage technique for making massive...
