"A sequel to her earlier, well-received title: Ecological Readings in the Veda, Dr. Marta Vannucci's this book sets out fresh, insightful analyses of the Vedic writings to highlight the ancient rsis' perceptions of the universe, nature, and cause-effect relationships; and how, millennia ago, these sages came to revere, even adore, nature in its different manifestations and, wittingly or unwittingly, evolve an environmentally friendly culture. In support of her findings, the author also analyses a few selected hymns from the Rgveda, using a biological key to 'decode' these songs. Additionally she also explores some important aspects of two Vedic Gods: Indra and Varuna, who respectively represent the 'material' and 'immaterial' reality. "Highly relevant appendices apart, the book includes a comprehensive glossary of Sanskrit/non-English words and numerous bibliographic references.".
