BookBaby, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Right before Thanksgiving Day of 1977, my wife and I decided to take our 5 children with us to the area in Western Pennsylvania where we were born and raised for Christmas. At Thanksgiving dinner, my wife announced our intention to spend the holidays with relatives on both sides of the family back home. Our 3 older boys were elated while our 9 month old baby boy and our dog didn't care. Our 5 year old daughter, however was devastated. She was convinced that Santa Claus would not know where to find her if she were not right there in her own house in Ohio on Christmas Eve. That would mean no gifts for her! Now our daughter's mind was a hard one to change. So instead of just telling her that she would have to trust her mother and father to do things in a way that would make things happen so that everyone would have a wonderfully beautiful Christmas, I decided on a deception that would result in her conviction that Santa was sure to find her on Christmas Eve. The ground work for the deception had already been laid by my claim in the past that Santa had always taken a break at our house to have a beer with me when his reindeer were flying him around delivering gifts to the children of the world. All we had to do was ask Santa if he knew where we were going to be on Christmas Eve and he would be sure to prove that he knew because after all, he was my good old buddy. Unfortunately, our daughter discovered that the supposed letters between us and Santa demonstrating his intimate knowledge of our family...
