It is not, says Sydney Smith, the man who first says a thing who deserves the credit, but he who says it so loud and so long that at last he persuades the world it is true. Having thus been able to do something more than snatch an occasional victory by sleight of hand, like Lis ton s, the art of the surgeon made rapid progress, and about 1862 Simpson began to insist that we should know some thing about surgical results, that we should know indeed not only whether we were doing as much as we could do for the welfare of patients upon whom we had to operate, but whether the results obtained were at all in proportion to the labor, expense, and suffering involved. Curiously enough, the research was at first not made on the main line, but on a side issue - that of inquiry as to the best method of closing bleeding points. Simpson collected a mass of statistics which excited amazement at the terrible mortality of such simple operations as amputation of the leg and forearm. He blamed the old method of ligature, and he led us astray about acupressure. But even that mis taken divergence was of infinite use, for it led us to discon tinne the long ligature - an advance which has never been acknowledged and never accredited to Simpson s work, as it ought to have been long ago. It was an advance as great as Ambroise Pare s introduction of the thread itself. In my youth every stump was left with a...
