Outskirts Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 460 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 1.2in. Even in the shadow, her past haunts her. In a small town in northern New Jersey someone (or something) has murdered a twenty year old woman by injecting liquid silver into her heart. It is one of a string of ghastly murders that are occurring around Grabenberg, NJ. OPIA, the Occult and Paranormal Investigation Agency, decides its time to call in their best agent. The only problem is Kirsas Heinrich has been living in a secluded town in Germany where her ancestors are from. There she is trying to rebuild her life after her parents murder and a grisly case brought her world tumbling down. Kirsas puts the clues left at the crime scene together and realizes her worst fear; a cult that has been targeting her family for years is now killing in her home town. The Church of Light, a radical cult that is against werewolves, vampires, witches, the fae and anyone that associates with them. Kirsas decides they must be stopped and she is the one to do it. When the Vampire Council hears she is working on the case they assign her a Shadow, a highly trained vampire bodyguard and assassin. For reasons lost to the council, Kirsas family has been under the protection of the vampires since the councils beginnings. Ayden O'Brien is one of the best Shadows and has been working on a case that is eerily similar to the events in New Jersey, investigating a group of young vampire delegates from the council that has gone missing. He has sworn to the Vampire Council that he will keep Kirsas safe and find out the truth, because the Church is after Kirsas. Kirsas and Ayden know that she will not be...
