Excerpt: . . . epistle to the York Committee to be up and doing. I am marching northwards, he concluded, with the greatest part of the army, where I shall be glad to hear from you. But his anxiety as to the whereabouts of his luckless rival was shortly afterwards dispelled by the capture of the Duke two days later at Uttoxeter, as already mentioned. He died on the scaffold for this business, being Earl of Cambridge, and an English peer as well as Scotch--the unhappiest of men; one of those singularly able men, to continue Carlyles rather enigmatic comment, who, with all their ability, have never succeeded in any enterprise whatever. It was from Wigan, too, on this same day, that Cromwell addressed an urgent appeal to the Derby House Committee for supplies. Our foot, he wrote, after a reminder that pay was far in arrears, want...
