Excerpt: . . . CHAP. III. MONUMENTS. In 1782, the floor of the cathedral was newly paved, which, occasioning a great change in the state of inscribed stones, and other alterations being made, totally disarranged many of the principal tombs. In the choir were formerly four monuments, one of which is said to have belonged c to Remigius, the first bishop. Remigius who began to build this church, and his successor Bloet, who finished it, had contiguous monuments, or, as Browne Willis calls them, chapels, on the north side of the choir. It is probable, that the monuments ascribed to both, were erected over their remains when the old choir was rebuilt by bishop Alexander, in the reigns of Henry I. and Stephen. The present situation of the monuments is on the north side near the altar; and over each is a canopy of Gothic arches, of very...
