Frequency does not seem to be regulated by form of government, for the rural state of Obwalden and the city of Basel are alike in having six sessions a year, and Appenzell Interior and Luzern both agree to have three. Legislatures, within constitutional limits, are masters of their own time and establish their own methods of organization. They are judges of the qualification of their members, adjourn from time to time upon their own motion, and cannot be dissolved by any other department of government. We observe in this latter fact that the state assemblies, notwithstanding some confusion of functions,...
