American Notes is a classic autobiographical work by Rudyard Kipling regarding the great English author s time living in America. Mr. Kipling purchased from his brother-in-law, Beatty Balestier, a tract of land about three miles north of Brattleboro , Vt., and on this erected a house at a cost of nearly $50,000, which he named The Naulahka. This was his home during his sojourn in America. Here he wrote when in the mood, and for recreation tramped abroad over the hills. His social duties at this period were not arduous, for to his home he refused admittance to all but tried friends. He made a study of the Yankee country dialect and character for The Walking Delegate, and while Captains Courageous, the story of New England fisher life, was before him he spent some time among the Gloucester fishermen with an acquaint-ance who had access to the household gods of these people.
