I see below, the people wend Their way unto the fountain there; While strains of music sweet ascend Like incense on the evening air. Some silvery voiced singer near Delights her audience, and they own By many an oft repeated cheer, The power of each magic tone. I cannot hope my simple lays Will thus be greeted; but I wait In silence till the coming days Shall speak and tell me of their fate. INDIPENDENCE DAY--1886 81 SONG to-day for all the brave, Who in the field or on the wave, Laid down their lives our land to save From foreign tyranny. Theirs was the smoke and din of War, The wound that left a deathless scar, The dreary night without a star--To shed its brilliancy. Ours is the golden reign of Peace, The joy that comes when sorrows cease; The glowing Morn whose beams increase In deep intensity. They builded better than they knew; There opened not unto their view The glorious visions reaching through The centuries to be. It is for us and ours to know The blessings that the ages owe To hearts and hands that struck the blow That gave us liberty. And from the East, where Plymouth strand Once saw a leeble Pilgrim band Chant in strange accents wild and grand The anthems of the free; And from the valleys of the West By Nature s hand so richly blest, There swells to-day from many a breast A...
