To assure the preservation of the human species, thousands of cryogenically frozen human embryos are sent into the outer universe. The great distances and time in flight required the use of these frozen embryos. These embryos are sent on one hundred pairs of space ships to the one hundred most likely habitable planets or moons in the galaxy and there to be raised by androids. Space ship Eighty seven being slightly off course, leads to a series of events where two of the embryos are raised and make a profound difference on two different hostile planets inhabited by humanoid species of their own. With no religious intent, these two children were named by the androids; Adam and Eve.
