Outdoorsy folk will get a kick out of this, and so will those who just enjoy something fun to read. Vance and Philip Bourjaily, father and son, write to each other, expending their ink on their latest adventures--or misadventures--at hunting, fishing, or just being outdoors. What with the era of faxes and low-cost long-distance phone calls having relegated the epistolary art to the ash heap of extinct communication techniques, you don't see many books composed of letters nowadays. But backward as letter writing may seem, the Bourjailys' examples give the wonderful sense of sitting down with a couple of folks, filling some glasses with some sort of quaff, and then spinning some tales, truthful or not. Through these letters, you get an inkling of how it is to fish for the fabled mahseer in India (or at least to try), to search for mushrooms in the woods, or to hunt ducks and quail in Iowa. Maybe there's no great literature to it, but just the glimmering this book imparts of how wonderful letter writing used to be and how father and son can share experiences without reaching out and touching someone is great enough. Jon Kartman --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title. From Kirkus Reviews A game bag stuffed to the limit by letters between a father and son swapping fishing and hunting stories. When veteran novelist Bourjaily (Old Soldier, 1990, etc.) and his son, Philip (a freelancer publishing in Field & Stream, Sports Afield, etc.), are approached to write a book that will provide insights into the...
