H and I, no essential differences are evident among the classes of different sizes. The results are entirely comparable, because the testing was done under the direction of the same superintendent. It is significant that with entirely different cities, with different population groups, with different types of school organization, results taken for the sole purpose of studying the improvement made by children show no correlation between class size and attainment. Section 4 Class Size Measured By Promotion Rate And Expenditure That this question might be studied from every important angle, complete data upon salaries and promotion rates were collected in all of the systems. For all of the systems the resemblance between the class size and the rate of promotion has been measured by the Pearson coefficient. 14 This has been selected because it gives a more precise index of relationship than is shown by roughly grouping rates of promotion by class sizes and averaging them. This latter method has been used for a few of the cities, and in addition, the resemblance between class size and promotion rate has been measured for all the classes of sizes sixteen to twenty, twenty-one to twenty-five, twenty-six to thirty, thirty-one to thirty-five, thirty-six to forty, forty-one to forty-five, forty-six to fifty, and over fifty. In no instance is the relationship different from that shown in the table. So far as these cities are concerned there is practically no relationship between classsize and promotion rate If one were to...
