Outskirts Press, United States, 2012. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .America has changed dramatically through the use of advertisements on radio, television, billboards, newspapers, and it is for the worse. Corporation advertisements have lied or misrepresented products to encourage people to buy them only to find out that later that these products are harmful to the environment and unborn children. Some advertisements created changes in the way Americans have always done things, for example, women have always breastfed their infants until the formula companies said that their product was better than breast milk. At this point in America most women do not breast feed despite the fact that formula companies have now said that breast milk is indeed much better than formula. Now it has become a pattern passed down from mother to daughter to continue and use formula. This is also how pollution is continued through generational use of pesticides that are not good for the environment. There are products that continue to keep Americans overweight and unhealthy and the truth needs to be told about these products through education and more label laws. The issues of genetic modified organisms (GMO) are a potential health hazard for human consumption. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) does not think that Americans have the right to know which foods have been altered to contain a pesticide inside the new crop of corn and wheat. This is wrong. Americans have the right to know what products have been genetically altered and what products are safe for their families. There are many products that have been around for generations that work much better than the newer fancier smelling products used for cleaning that hurt our environment. One example is vinegar. Vinegar cleans coffee pots without...
