On Saturday December 14, his Royal Highness the Prince Consort died, at the comparatively early age of 42. His death was the cause of deep and general sorrow, in which the people of Birmingham most sincerely participated. The day of the funeral, December 23, was observed here with unusual solemnity. The scene presented is thus described in the Journal of the 28th: --If externals may be taken as a gauge of those hidden feelings which are now and then awakened in the public breast by some great and momentous national calamity, the solemnity of grief was on Monday displayed in this town in all reality and in the deepest sincerity. Never, in our remembrance, was there such an universal demonstration of sorrow as that which was witnessed yesterday; and it showed that whilst lamenting the death of the late Prince Consort, as the husband of our gracious Queen, and as the father of a happy and united family, the people of this country are deeply imbued with a sense of the pure and exalted virtues of which the life of his late Royal Highness was so practical and striking an...
