In this time, those men prepared with cribs have ample time to compare the paper with such notes. The use of sealing lists is another suggestion which student discussions have brought out. lly this method those men who are most liable to cheat can be seated in the most advantageous places for surveillance by the supervisors. The chief argument for this system seems to be that only those who intend to cheat, or who cheat regularly, could object to this plan. And, on the other hand, the honest men would court such an arrangement; for. if they happened to be assigned to a conspicuous seat, they would be just...
