RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 80 pages. LC Number: KF25 . E2 2009n OCLC Number: (OCoLC)613333786 Subject: Predatory lending -- United States. Excerpt: . . . Infrastructure needs continue to gather attention and interest from all sides including States, utility providers, and the public. More and more often, we see reports of failing infrastructure, in many cases a legacy of previous times and conditions and of previous management decisions. We are also seeing growing examples of communities that cannot financially meet obligations placed upon them by the environmental and public health regulations. These episodes are not limited to any region of the country or to any size of system. Each and every member of this committee is familiar with a case in his or her own State of a water or a wastewater system unable to meet current demands. These examples include: crumbling transmission systems, treatment works needing upgrades or replacement, weather- related stresses, and other problems. These situations affect both the public and private systems. As public servants, we are driven to want to help. But before we can do so, we must have a better understanding on the magnitude of the problem that we are trying to address. That is what brings us here today. Future hearings in this subcommittee will explore other components of this challenge. Today, however, we are trying to answer one simple underlying question: How big is the problem of water and wastewater infrastructure needs in America today To get there, we ask our witnesses today to help us with this challenge by providing their perspectives on the size of the problem. We would also appreciate their ability to document their findings so that we are able to compare apples to apples, so to speak. Although there...
