Excerpt: . . . pieces of Belgian equipment, haversacks, boots and trousers lay around; while the inhabitants stood about with their hands raised above their heads. It was said that hostile cavalry had hidden in the village and together with a part of the inhabitants had fired on our troops. We only saw the consequences. After a long rest before Louvain we entered the town at 7 p. m. Our artillery had taken up a semi-circular position on the heights around and directed their cannon on to the town. 107 Footnote 107: Ibid. , pp. 22-3. The above events occurred on August 19th, exactly six days before the sack of Louvain. It strikes one as remarkable that the German cannon were even on that day directed against an unfortified city. Risse was among the first German troops to enter Brussels. Our route took us through some of the principal streets, and various splendid buildings including the Royal palace. Joy shone in our faces and a feeling of pride swelled our breasts at being the first to enter Belgium's capital. These feelings found expression in our talk and shouts. The man behind me shouted to every bewildered, staring Belgian whom we passed: Yes, young fellow, you are astonished, you blockhead! On we marched with the air of victors. The inhabitants were exceedingly kind, so that one had not at all the feeling of being in the capital of an enemy. They brought us water, lemonade, beer, cigars, cigarettes, etc. , without asking for any payment. 108 Footnote 108: Ibid. , pp. 26-7. The same writer refers to similar hospitality in various parts of his book. After passing through Brussels he continues...
