Excerpt from History of the Town of Greenwich: From the Earliest Settlement to the Centennial Anniversary of Our National Independence: Including Also, an Oration Delivered by Hon. D. A. Boies, a Greenwich, N. Y., July 4th, 1876 The town of Greenwich is situated in the southern half of the county Of Washington, with the Hudson River as its Western boundary, the Battenkill forming its line of division from Easton and Jackson on the South, while it adjoins Salem on the East and Argyle and Fort Edward on the North, to complete its boundary lines. The town is about twelve miles in length from east to west, with an average width of five miles and contains about acres of excellent land, which is somewhat rolling in its topographical aspects, but forms, nevertheless one of the most beautiful, as well as the most fertile localities in this section of New York state. A prominent feature in the topography of the locality is Bald Mountain, situated in the northern portion Of the town. This mountain has an eminence of 912 feet above tide-water, is a mile or more in length, and is made up of a superior quality of blue lime stone. It forms one Of a range Of hills running north through the county into Hampton and thence to Vermont. Eminent geologists have studied the rocks composing this mountain, but.
