Shattercolors Press, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .A Parisian fight-for-love story. Having just arrived in Paris, New Yorkers William, Christina, and Pascale are looking forward to six weeks of uninhibited fun with their French friends, a group of students and aspiring actors--everyone is in their early twenties, neither settled into careers nor domestic life. Adventures are soon had in Pere Lachaise cemetery, at a raucous Montparnasse loft party, and under the stars in Montsouris Park. Matters become unexpectedly serious when William meets Genevieve, a native Parisian, and they fall deeply in love--a first time experience for both. As William and Genevieve begin to get to know one another an obstacle presents itself in the person of Baptiste, a childhood friend of Genevieve s who delusionally believes himself entitled to her affection and begins a campaign of interference and intimidation. So insufferable does Baptiste become that Genevieve and the group as a whole sever all ties with him; enraged at being denied direct access to Genevieve, he begins stalking her and assaults William in the street. In response, a humiliating prank is played on Baptiste in an effort to frighten him off. Instead of having the intended effect, the prank further unhinges Baptiste and propels him into outright madness--a situation that forces a violent confrontation. Love triumphs in Attraction and Repulsion, but not easily--William and Genevieve must fight through extreme tumult before enjoying their right to love one another in peace. Along the way they learn that love deepens when it suffers through opposition, and bonds of trust are stronger when forged in the fires of conflict. They also reaffirm what they already know: a circle of devoted friends is a gift beyond estimation, and fun is a very effective medication for...
