Excerpt from Electronic Composition in Printing: Proceedings of a Symposium, National Bureau of Standards, June 15-16, 1967 On behalf of the Institute for Applied Technology, I welcome you to the National Bureau of Standards. I am pleased to note that your program includes provision for you to visit some of our facilities here. As we are located on some 560 acres, it will not be possible for you to see everything, but I hope you will take the opportunity to see what you can. One of the more exciting things to Visit is a 100-foot linear accelerator which produces one of the world s most intense electron beams. We also have a high-flux nuclear reactor for research on the properties of materials, and of course a great deal of work going on in various aspects of the computer field. As I see it, this symposium addresses itself to the merger of two technologies. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
