IN WHICH PHIL HAS A TALK WITH HIS FATHER, AND REVIEWS HIS PAST HISTORY. I must go to Chicago, father, said I, one evening, after we had been discussing our domestic relations with more than usual earnestness. Why go to Chicago, Philip What put that idea into your head replied my father, with a kind of deprecatory smile. I dont feel as though I could live any longer in this state of doubt and uncertainty. Really, Philip, I dont think you need worry yourself to that extent. I cant help it. I want to know whether my mother is alive or dead. She may have been in her grave for a year for aught we know. Not so bad as that, Philip. I am sure if anything had happened to her, we should have heard of it, added my father, mildly; but I saw that he had more feeling on the subject than he chose to manifest. It seems to me inhuman and unnatural to live in this way, I persisted, perhaps a little more impatiently than I ought to...
